

WELCOME NEW TEACHERS, STUDENTS

Miss Naylor-Smith was interviewed and here are some of the things we discovered about our new English teacher:

- She attended college for Library Science and was offered a teaching position at a charter school in Colorado and discovered teaching to be the best job.
- One of the funniest moments as a teacher would be when the new Taylor Swift album came out and three students came in and told her about it and they all started jumping up and down in excitement.
- She became an English teacher because she believes studying English is a way to learn about the world around us and she enjoys sharing that knowledge with her students.

Mr. Kellison was also interviewed and here are some of the things we discovered about our new history teacher:

- History and sociology were the only career options he felt comfortable with teaching.
- If he could teach any other subject it would be math.
- He chose to come to St. Joe because it was the first full time job offer he was given.
- His goal here at St. Joe is to teach relevant information. He doesn't want to just teach them facts, he wants students to actually know the depths of history

Congratulations Mrs. Webb on your promotion to Vice Principal. Here are some facts about our new Vice Principal that you may not have known:

- She also loves teaching math and she doesn't see herself ever giving that up. Ms. Webb also said she thinks it's great that Mrs. Luther is also taking on more math classes as well.
- She wants to continue and add more dual credit and AP classes in the future.
- To Mrs. Webb, just learning the ropes, just like in any other new job or position, was one of the most glaring difficulties she had transitioning to the role of assistant principal here at school.
- She wants people to be comfortable with math because no matter what you teach or do in life, you have to do some sort of math to get there.
